

Accession number: 1992-24/39a/g

Description: Sheet of paper, watermarked 'ES 1820' with a fleur-de-lys. Letter from T. Carr to [Mr Beltz?] 1 April 1823

Transcript: Dear Sir,

I suspect that Mr. Deane has not apprised you of my having put an End to all further interference of his on the part of the Trust last Saturday, when I required him to make up and let me have all his Accounts that these might be settled. And as I must be prepared to meet the master next Tuesday I requested every thing might be delivered in this week, and having [----] informed me he should be pressed to do so, as tomorrow I hope he will comply. Until he has delivered in the inventories of the Effects of every description, it will be premature to make arrangements with Mr. Christie and Mr. Burrell, and I propose, as soon as M^r Dean hands over the inventories to have Meeting with those gentlemen, along with you and perhaps it will be a good opportunity to get Mr. Christie to meet us at Hampton next Monday, when Mr. Dowdeswell will be there. I shall send to Mr. Christie and prepare him.

I have thought it right to express what I have about Mr. Dean, as I believe he will endeavour to continue his interference in the Trust affairs, if not guarded against & this will be attended with an Expence which the Master will not Sanction, after the intimation I gave him last Saturday.

If the weather continues fine, I should think you and Mr. Rackett might go to Hampton on Saturday afternoon and remain 'till Monday in which case M^{rs} Carr and I would meet you there on Saturday, and I would desire M^{rs} Wallin to make preparation. We could then arrange matters for Mr. & Mrs. Dowdeswell on Monday.

I am dear Sir yours most truly

T. Carr

John Street

Tuesday 1st April 1823

Notes:

Mr. Burrell

David Garrick Papers, Hereford Museum

Mr & Mrs Carr: Thomas Carr, Mrs' Garrick's solicitor; his wife was a close friend of hers. After Mrs Garrick's death he bought the Hampton house estate and put it in repair.

Richmond Libraries Local Studies Collection 'local_history_garricks_villa.pdf'. p.5

Mr Christie:

Mr Dean: James Dean, agent to the Garrick Trustees, 34 Tavistock St., Covent Garden, see 1992-24/39e/d

Mr Dowdeswell

Mrs Wallin